Jerry M. Porter's Address

Speech of Jerry M. Porter, of Clinton, Ky., formerly of Paducah, and known as the "Bill Nye of Kentucky," delivered at Lincoln's tomb, Springfield, Ill., June 8th, 1904, in the presence of the delegates of the Travelers' Protective Association, on the occasion of the presentation of a floral design given by the Louisville Division, the design borne by two old rebel soldiers escorted by members of the Grand Army Post, Springfield: My Fellow Traveling Men of America:

This is a great day in a good world, but a most solemn hour in my lifetime, as I attempt a public oration in this sacred, holy city of the dead. I have never lived among the dead for any one whole day in all my life time, nor have I ever spoken to the living above the silent sleeping forms of the dead. I have always diligently sought company of the living and alive; but these passing moments with their environments appeal to my senses in a way that only a few truths in history, reinforced by facts to today can begin to tell.

Nearly a hundred years ago, two of our nation's most illustrious men were born in Kentucky, my loved native state, Abraham Lincoln and Jefferson Davis. Boys of the same state and nativity, almost of the same neighborhood, were permitted to see the first light of a beautiful world in the same bluegrass and the "Pennyridge" in Kentucky.

Oh, what awful history so often hovers so unknowingly around a single humble home of men!

By course of human events common to all men, these boys separated in early manhood from each other in Kentucky, one going north, the other going south, only to meet again in the nation's capital a few years later on, each one the champion of his respective locality of people upon the greatest constitutional question that has ever pestered the minds of men in modern history of human events.

The very foundations of the government rocked and quaked and trembled, as these two good men earnestly laid before the people each his interpretation of the great questions of state. Meanwhile armies clashed on battlefields where home-loving, patriotic men fell and were buried by thousands and thousands in cold trenches without coffin and without shroud, all covered in human blood spilled by brothers of one common ancestry.

Finally the conflict ended, and only forty years have passed and gone, and we stand here today, sons and daughters of our fathers living and dead who bore arms on one side or the other of that awful civil conflict, while two old rebel soldiers, one from the state of Virginia and the other from Texas, bearing a floral offering from the traveling men of Louisiana escorted by members of the Grand Army Post of Springfield, Ill., and have lovingly and patriotically placed the same on the tomb of Abraham Lincoln. Oh, what a transition for man to look upon! Oh, what promises we may offer of generosity and love for all true Americans! Not a cloud hangs over our uncovered heads in all the sky above us while we solemnly realize that locality has everything to do with men and means when nations clash in civil war, but absolutely has nothing more to do when peace is restored and the morning of love comes again.

Abraham Lincoln and Jefferson Davis were the central figures among all statesmen of their day and time, and if I would make stronger still the great power that locally holds over men in all civil conflicts, I would venture to say that had Lincoln gone

THE BRADFIELD REGULATOR CO., ATLANTA, GA.

South when he moved from Kentucky, and had Davis gone North, truths in history would have been just the reverse of what they are now when coupled with the names of these two great and good men; and we today might have been standing at the tomb of Jefferson Davis, while Abraham Lincoln would be silently sleeping in a grave-yard of some loved southern home, and yet both be loved and mourned by patriotic hearts all over the land as we love the memory of these good men today.

And as I close I would invoke the blessings of God on our uncovered heads while the Angels around his throne, commingling with the departed spirits of these two sainted men witness the scene, while we pledge ourselves anew to live in the future for the nation and the constitution and to sacredly guard them as these two good spirits would have us do. Then Old America, the land of the free and the home of the brave shall ever stand among nations—

"Like some tall cliff that rears its mighty form Bursts through the veil and midway leaves the storm,
Around her breast the storms and
clouds are spread,
While eternal sunshine shall settle on her head."

YARDS CLEAR

PLENTY OF MOTIVE POWER
ENABLES I. O. TO HANDLE
TRAINS PROMPTLY.

The local south Illinois Central yards are now clear of freight cars except for a few scattered "gons" and box cars and from present indications will be kept clear.

An official stated today that the reason the yards were clear is because of the abundance of power now at the command of the local officials. Heretofore when the business was heavy the trains could not be handled for lack of motive power, but the dull season is on and this reinforced by the abundance of engines make it an easy matter to keep the yard clear.

She went to jail in default of bond, and the case against the other women, who cut in self-defense, was dismissed.

CANTEEN MISSED

BAD LIQUOR AND OPIUM TAKE PLACE OF BETTER
STIMULANTS.

Washington, July 7.—An argument in favor of the restoration of the army canteen, for which Representative Bartholdt of St. Louis, has been a zealous worker, is contained in a recent letter from Lieutenant Colonel John L. Chamberlain, inspector general of the Philippines division.

"The absence of the canteen," says Colonel Chamberlain, "is severely felt. The effect is to encourage men to drink the various native drinks, many of which are very injurious, and to encourage the use of opium. At the several points inspected by men in the department of Mindanao it was learned that in spite of all precautions considerable liquor, usually of bad quality, found its way into the garrisons. A canteen where the men could purchase good beer and wine at a reasonable price would be a blessing."

From another point of view the closing of the canteen caused the companies to lose the profits, which amounted to $100 or $150 a month, which were expended for newspapers, magazines, games and other amusements and delicacies for the mess. We are now providing most exchanges as a substitute, where the soldiers may find a pleasant place to loaf and read the newspapers and play games. They will have billiards and pool rooms and lunch rooms at which simple refreshments, coffee, tea and soft drinks, will be sold and, where they can buy at cost prices tinned goods and other supplies formerly sold by sutlers. We hope such resorts will prove effectual in keeping the boys away from disreputable places."

Rev. and Mrs. William Tipton, of Elizabethton, Tenn., who will go to China as missionaries in September, under the patronage of the First Baptist church of this city, left for home today after a visit to Rev. and Mrs. G. W. Perryman.
